INTRODUCTION

Since its original publication, the Directory of European Energy Agencies has become a mainstay of ManagEnergy's work. This edition provides updated contact details for 426 agencies in 31 countries.

Energy agencies in the directory are classified according to country and type - national N, regional R or local L. For the first time, the directory lists associations of energy agencies A, island energy agencies i, and energy departments of major cities D. The directory also contains each energy agency's year of establishment, their number of staff, and – another first - their social media handles.

Local and regional energy agencies play an important, though often overlooked, role in achieving the EU 2020 energy and climate goals. Energy agencies support local development by acting as intermediaries between local and regional authorities and other players in the energy market. They advocate for sustainability, provide information and technical guidance, and offer other services based on local energy needs. These activities help change behaviour, create jobs, and attract investments in sustainable energy at the local level.

A printed map of European energy agencies – a useful companion to this directory – is also available to pick up at ManagEnergy events.

What is ManagEnergy?

ManagEnergy was established in part to help energy agencies work together more effectively. This directory is an effort to help make that happen.

Over the years, ManagEnergy's online offerings have grown substantially. Its website showcases all kinds of sustainable energy actions by local and regional authorities, with an increasing focus on financing for sustainable energy actions by or in partnership with the public sector. The website is also the place to find the latest news and events on EU sustainable energy.

ManagEnergy also organises capacity building workshops and networking meetings across Europe. These events provide practical guidance to staff of municipalities and other local and regional energy entities with a public mandate, particularly those from cities that have signed, or aspire to sign, the Covenant of Mayors. The workshops cover various aspects of Sustainable Energy Action Plans – their development, financing, and implementation. Between 2012 and 2015, ManagEnergy will organise 45 capacity building workshops across Europe.

426 Energy Agencies listed in this directory

The networking meetings often have a broader scope within the sustainable energy field. The events aim to facilitate learning, exchange and networking for local and regional professionals working in the sustainable energy field. The meetings are held on a regular basis, often in Brussels, for a select number of participants. By 2015, ManagEnergy will have organised more than 30 meetings.

ManagEnergy is always on the lookout for interesting sustainable energy stories involving the public sector. Contact ManagEnergy if you think your story fits the bill!
